

Competency in English Composition

All students in the master's degree programs are expected to be proficient in speaking and writing in English. An English language assessment test may be administered to those whose first language is not English in order to determine the need for possible further work in this area. An English language writing test is administered to all entering master's degree program students during the orientation session in the fall semester of each year.

Students who are determined to need further work in English composition will be notified and required to comply.

Continuation in the academic program will depend upon meeting this requirement.
